The image above shows a triangle made up of the letters in the word Thanksgiving. Starting with the top row and working your way down row by row, there are many different paths you can take to spell out the word. Let's say that an allowable path through any given letter can only go to either of the two letters below it. If you could count all of the allowable paths that spell out the word "Thanksgiving", how many would there be?